NEW MEN FOR CARDS IN GAME ON SUNDAY WITH CHICAGO GREYS

Fast Fielding Infield and Hard Hitting Outfield Combination is Expected For Coming Schedule.

Janesville's rejuvenated Cardinals will make the Janesville fans more than please the weather man prohibits against the Chicago Greys and the fans of this city will see a nine that will probably remain intact throughout the remainder of the season. The Cardinals will be Bob Fick pitching and the big Madison boy has shown the Janesville fans some sterling pitching so far this season. His victory over the Beloit Fairies entitles him to respect and admiration all season long, but Bob is the brand of a pitcher who will never slough work or effort to bring a victory.

For a catcher, Bridges, Fucik's regular battery mate, may be secured and it is sincerely hoped that such is the truth. Bridges is a skilled catcher and base thrower and if there is any one department that the Cardinals need strength it is behind the bat. Sunday last, Sugrue was not any too sure of holding Fucik and four stole on him through his poor throwing. This would never have happened with Bridges, or even Calkins, behind the plate. Bridges appears to have it on any catcher who has played here this year, not excepting Sullivan, the Dubuque leaguer whom Beloit fancies greatly.

For short, Dehr will play with Hyland at second. Both of these infielders are "sweet" infielders and are hitters. If Kerman, the Chicago man who played short at Beloit, falls down in his tryout with the Cubs this week, he will be at third, his regular position. Kerman wrote to Manager Caldwell, Sunday, that he was afforded a chance with Bresnahan's nine and was going to make the most of it. No first baseman has been secured and another bid is being made for Fraser of Peoria, who is a heavy, consistent hitter. This combination would make an air-tight infield and above all, a good hitting combination. Brogan, the shortstop, whom Manager Caldwell sought for last Sunday's game, has signed in the Central league at the two hundred a month mark, so there is no chance of securing him.

In the outfield, there will be a combination of players who can hit the ball. "Home-run" Curtis of Beloit will be in one garden, and needless to say Curtis will be well received by the fans for that four-ally wallop he hit over the Beloit fence, clinching the game in the ninth inning with two down. He is a fast fielder and an experienced player. Cardinal regular will draw one of the other jobs in the outer garden. There has been no better fielder at the local diamonds than Morrissey, for he can get over the ground and pinch with ball without fail. A few more games and he should hit better, for he can clear the ball at a fearful rate. Witcomb, another heavy hitter, or Lampert, will be in the other field.

The object has been to get players who can increase the batting average in the outfield with a collection of hitting and defense stars for the infield. All this will be needed many league veterans in their line-up with Carson and Baird as the battery. The Greys split fifty-fifty in two games with the Beloit Fairies, winning with Carson on the mound. A few more games with Chicago teams without a defeat, and then prepare for the series with Beloit.

"Push" Miller and "Ziggy" Cornell are pushing with the Whitewater nine at a great clip and nothing would please the Janesville fans more than to see Whitewater and Janesville clash on the diamond. Cornell's loss to the Cardinals is repeated, but "Denny" Blake showed far better at second than the Clinton man last Sunday. Hyland has played several games with the Cardinals in past years and should fit the place.

Fans of Vancouver staged a benefit for the ball team there that furnished something unusual in the way of a game. A team of lacrosse players played the baseball team, using their lacrosse bats to hit and catch the ball and they say they showed the baseballers a few tricks. The best thing about the benefit, however, was that it netted over $1,000, which was turned over to Bob Brown to keep his Vancouver team afloat in the North-western league.

HEATED FIGHTS FOR THE PENNANTS WILL BE SEEN IN ALL THE LEAGUES; TEAMS ARE GROUPED AT TOP AND PROMISE THRILLS

Baseball fans seem to have been bored with the game this season and not to have gathered at the parks in their usual manner. Whatever may be the cause of the poor attendance, it is sure they cannot blame the league races. It is now to be seen that in the American, National and Federal leagues and the American Association the first three and four teams at the top are neck and neck.

Eddie Foster was a shortstop when he started out, and Cliff made a fine third baseman out of him. Now he has been transplanted to second and it improves as much as he did with his other shift he'll have Collins looking like a hitting post.

Bill Rapp, who was with the Cincinnati Reds in the south, has joined the team throughout some of the eastern circuits.

Des Moines club of the Western league has more of the famous world's champion hitless White Sox of 1906 on its payroll than any team in the country. They are Lee Tannehill, Eddie Hahn and Frank Isbell. All were heroes of the famous victory over the Chicago Cubs that year. At present Tannehill and Hahn, together with Billy Sullivan, are the only active members of the 1906 champions.

President Tener says that the pitching in his circuit is better than for many years.

The Chicago Americans probably will train in Miami, Fla., next spring instead of California, as has been their habit. President Comiskey announced. Negotiations for training quarters in the Florida city are now going on, he said. "Miami seems to have all the natural advantages, and with jaunts to Key West and Havana and games with southern clubs, the White Sox can get plenty of practice," said Comiskey.

It must be comforting to the veteran Jack Meyers to know that Manager McGraw is trying to get him off the payroll, and that even Cincinnati will not have him. McGraw, according to the story, offered the Indian and Brainerd for Wingo, but Manager Herzog of the Reds refused to make the deal. Meyers might at least play first base for the Reds to their advantage.

James Johnson is one promoter who is not in favor of the proposed scheme to organize a promoters' union to curb the great evil of the boxers by doing away with guarantees. Johnson is of the opinion that promoting is a business in which the weakest must go to the wall. He says that he never gives guarantees himself unless sure of a profit, and that the others should do likewise. If they have not sense enough to know that a match is worth, Johnson says, that is none of his business, and he can't see why he should join a movement that will protect his rivals when he needs no such protection himself.

The lack of enthusiasm for the Pacific coast trip on the part of the members of the New York Athletic club track team is not quite universal. There's one Mercury Foot athlete who is just brimming over with a sincere desire to represent his club at the Panama-Pacific events. This fellow is so keen for the fray that he is going to pay his own way from China to States to wear the winged foot in the Panama-Pacific high jump, and he is none other than D. W. Walker, the crack high jumper, who has been working for three years at teaching in the Anglo-Chinese college in Tien-Tsin. Early in 1914 Walker organized among the American college men in Tien-Tsin an all-American track and field team, and with this aggregation he toured about, cleaning up everything in sight in the way of opposition.

The New York Sun says: "For any team to make more than two hits off Alexander is a moral victory."

NEW PITCHING FIND OF NATIONAL LEAGUE

Albert Leon Mamaux.

Albert Leon Mamaux, the Pittsburgh youngster, is considered a pitching find in baseball circles. Mamaux has an assortment of fine curves, a fast ball with a wicked hop and a change of pace which would do credit to Mathewson. His record thus far this season has been exceptional; he pitched eighteen games and won fourteen of them.

Wells will improve. He is just the stamp of man who will do so under military training. Billy, old dear, may win the Victoria Cross on the field, but never in the ring. It may require a different sort of courage to do gallant things under fire, but no amount of training will ever make Wells a game man in the ring. He can't and won't take a beating.

Imagine a cigar 30 feet long and 6 feet thick and you have a fair photograph of a Confederate submarine that sank a big Union warship in Charleston harbor. This curious craft was built in Mobile, and Captain Hundley, who helped construct her, perished while making an experimental trip.

CUBS VS. THE GIANTS IN DOUBLE BILL FOR THE NEXT TWO DAYS

Chicago, July 30.—After two days of idleness the Giants and Cubs will clash for four games, two each day, beginning today. The game Thursday was called off because of rain and the fact the game at the White Sox park was to be for the Eastland relief fund. Catcher O'Farrell and George L. Kelly, infielder, will make their initial appearance with the Cubs today.

Rain Stops Sox.

Boston, Mass., July 30.—Rain prevented the final game with the Boston Red Sox and the Chicago White Sox, the game being called after three innings of scoreless baseball. Ed Walsh will probably pitch in one of the New York games.

Whales in Lead.

Chicago, July 30.—The Eastland relief fund was boosted to the score of $355.44 the proceeds from the game played between the Chicago and Buffalo teams yesterday. The Whales, Chicago, captured the game by the score of 4 to 2. Hendrix and Krapp were the rival pitchers.

Managers Suspended.

Chicago, July 30.—Manager Stovall of Kansas City and Manager Magee of the Brooklyn and Benny Kauff, the Fed jumper, were suspended by President Gilmore for trouble with the umpire in a game at Kansas City. Both managers threaten to quit unless there is better umpiring in the outlaw circuit.

Ragan Aids Braves.

Cincinnati, O., July 30.—Pitcher Ragan won two games for Boston on Thursday by defeating Cincinnati 10 to 5 in the first and 7 to 6 in the second. Ragan was taken out in the first game at the end of the fourth inning when Boston was in the lead. In the second he was put in after Davis had allowed five hits and four runs.

The first game was an easy victory for Boston, but the second was an uphill fight. Cincinnati, having a fly run lead at the beginning of the fifth inning. In the fifth Boston made four runs off a base on balls, three doubles and a single. They scored three more in the seventh, when they were presented with three bases on balls and all three scored on Schmidt's double.

Is Wagner Dead?

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 30.—Pittsburgh defeated Brooklyn 8 to 2 here on Thursday. The locals won the game in the fifth, when three runs were scored. Wagner, the eighth, hit for a home run with the bases full. In the seventh right fielder Hinchman got an unassisted double play when he caught Myers' line hit and ran to first base in time to put out Pfeffer, who had started for second when the ball was hit.

III Effects of Worry.

The effect of worry upon the internal glands has not been fully studied. Enough is known, however, to assure the physician that it affects the secretions of these glands very seriously through the sympathetic nerves. It thus becomes an important agent in producing exophthalmic goiter and a train of other ills that can only be defined when the real functions of the glands in question are more adequately studied.

GAZETTE PRINTING CO.

CARRANZA'S RESPONSIBILITY.
So much has been said and written about the Mexican situation that it is interesting to note that the New York Globe places the entire responsibility for lack of peace and harmony in our sister republic on the shoulders of Carranza. It says:

"What is the obstacle to peace in Mexico? As near as can be made out it is Carranza."

"The renewal of the war in Mexico was due to Carranza's refusal to agree to abide the result of a decision by a convention, which should include in its membership the principal men of the successful constitutional party, as to who and what should govern Mexico during the period preceding the establishment of a legal government. Other leaders, putting the interests of their country above their personal ambitions, agreed to surrender their power. But Carranza, by accident the nominal first chief of the constitutional party, stubbornly refused to support this program."

"Our government, bearing in mind its responsibilities to the world and to its own citizens in Mexico, can well afford to shape things as to make it clearly appear to all Mexicans where in is the obstacle to peace. If there is another parley, as is now proposed, we can afford to give our moral support to those who make peace the first consideration. If a conference is held and Carranza will not come into it, it will be evident where the difficulty lies."

"Carranza is now trying to maintain the same sort of irresponsible, autocratic government by decree that the Madero revolution was started to relieve Mexico of. As such his elimination, or at least his submission to the general will, is necessary to the pacification of Mexico. The administration will be constant in its efforts to put up in every available way those who are willing to consent to pacification and opposes in every available way those who are seeking to keep themselves in power."

OUR GOVERNOR.

If any taxpayer in the state of Wisconsin thinks that the executive office at Madison they have not a personal representative of their own individual interests in Emanuel L. Philipp they should pay a special visit to that office and watch the state's chief executive at work.

Governor Philipp is working harder to give the state of Wisconsin a business administration than he ever worked in his own business affairs. He is so thoroughly interested in his labors that the periods of time count for nothing.

Long before the civil service employees of the state think of starting for their day's work Philipp is in his office. Sometimes he is too busy to go out to lunch even and a bite to eat is brought to him. How he manages to accomplish such a vast amount of work each twenty-four hours is a marvel, but he does.

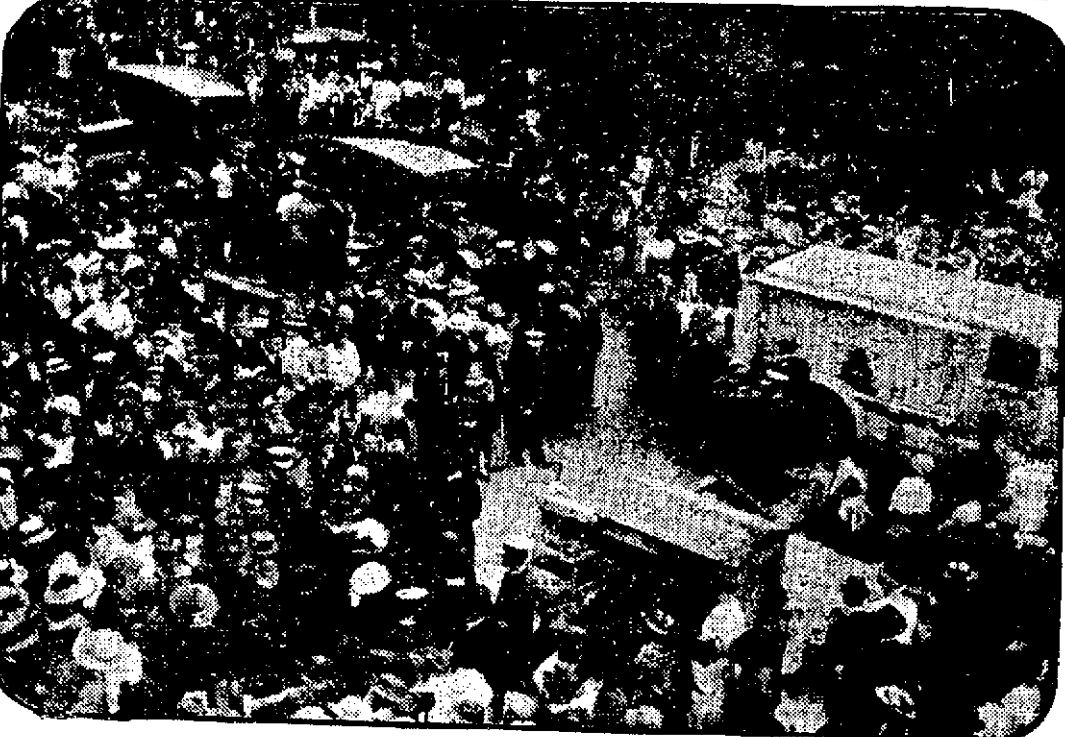

Nor does his work stop when the six o'clock whistles have blown, and until the late hours of the evening he can be found in his office, perhaps not actually working, but meeting callers, discussing plans for the next day and gaining information that will be of benefit to him in his efforts to reduce the burden of taxation and give the people of the state a business administration.

It was stated in the assembly Thursday that the governor has paid fifteen thousand dollars out of his own pocket for personal investigation of the needs of the various state institutions. What other state executives have done this in the past?

The direct result of his investigations is now developing. All of his consolidation measures may have failed in passage through opposition of the "Tax-eaters" league, but when it comes to the appropriation measures the governor is standing firmly on a sound basis. When a curative bill is made of nearly four hundred thousand dollars in the sum demanded by the finance committee for the use of the State Board of Control, and the president and secretary of that board appear before the assembly, seated as a committee of the whole, and admit the cut is correct, it shows how some of the leakage of state funds can be stopped by a man who tries.

Governor Philipp is one of the hardest working state executives Wisconsin has ever had. He means business and the mere title of governor is simply to him a trust conferred upon him by the voters to guard their interests. He does not play politics. He names men for responsible positions because they are qualified for

MOURNERS BY THOUSANDS AT EASTLAND VICTIMS' FUNERAL

On Wednesday last Cicero, a suburb of Chicago, where the General Electric company's plant is located, was a village of the dead. All day long funeral corteges wended their slow way from stricken homes to crowded churches, and from churches to cemeteries. And all day the rain fell on mourners by thousands whose grief made them forget the discomfort.

The office. Had he played politics it would have been plain sailing in holding control of the senate organization but he did not and the "Tax-eaters" gained control.

Philipp is the people's governor. He is fighting their battles and he is making a gallant battle against odds. He works with his coat off. With his sleeves rolled up. He is not the smooth and polished politician who wears a silk hat, a Prince Albert coat, gloves or spats, but just one of the workers that works and one of the big men that accomplishes what he sets out to do.

THE BEST RESULTS.

The city council is seeking to obtain the best results possible in letting contracts for street work. Mayor Fathers states that no matter which material is used it must pass certain tests and must be guaranteed. If the cheaper grade can pass these requirements, well and good; if not, then the grade that can will be used. Good streets at an economical cost is what the council seeks and in this they believe they are following out the dictates of the taxpayers who ultimately pay the cost of improvements. Who ever obtains the contracts now under discussion by the guaranty and the taxpayers will be the ones benefited.

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

The Village Blacksmith. Under the spreading chestnut tree, the village smithy stands. The smith, a mighty man is he, with large and sinewy hands. He owns a dozen village lots and handsome country lands.

He owns a handsome private yacht and proud seaside chateau. He travels in a private car wherever he may go.

His fortune now is reckoned at five million plunks, or more. He doesn't shoe mules any more, or mend the one-horse shay; He makes more in a second now than once he did all day. He merely tinkers touring cars that pass along his way.

Uncle Abner. You can't touch Lem Higgins' folks with a ten-foot pole. They are right in style now, because their daughter is going to marry a title. She is to marry an M. D.

Hank Purdy says if it wasn't for the uniform, he would play the tuba drum in the Silver Cornet band. It is too much like "workin' at the boiler makin' trade."

You can't always tell by the watch. Many an honest Ingersoll beats beneath a brookcloth jacket.

Honestly may be the best policy, but there are quite a few who speak favorably of the twenty-year endowment.

The Old Town. "Where's the old blacksmith shop where I picked the hot penny off the penny?"

The blacksmith organized the Gluetown Garage and Gasoline Corporation, sold the stock and went to Europe.

Where's the old oaken bucket from which I sipped many a cool draft?

"The health department has it in a glass case as a horrible exhibit." "What's become of the little red school house?" "Mrs. Can Coin bought it to use as a hospital for her Pmerianians."

"How about the common where we used to play one old cat?" "The Confederate league has bought it and we're going to have a game there as soon as we can get Bill Duffy to jump to us."

"The old tavern is the same, I suppose?" "No; Billy went out of business rather than cater to the motorist taste for drinks with seven kinds of liquor and vegetables in them."

"The post office?" "Not much changed. But Joe Gimp isn't postmaster any more. This postcard craze drove him blind trying to keep up with his reading."

"Isn't anything the same as it used to be?" "Yes, just one. When you go to get shaved, you'll find that the barber's conversation and his razor are exactly the same as they were when you went away."

Your Best Friend. Don't you know what people say: "Map yo' route an' ever obtain the contracts now under discussion by the guaranty and the taxpayers will be the ones benefited."

Why They Fire 101 Guns. The origin of the English royal salute, which consists of 101 guns, is explained as follows: It was originally decreed that the sovereign should be saluted with 100 guns, but once when the duke of York, afterward William IV, was being greeted by the fleet the officers in charge lost count and ordered another round to be fired to make sure.

Reason for Hand-Shake. Hand-shaking has a military origin. In early times when soldiers met, to convince one another that no harm was intended and that they held no weapons, they extended and grasped each other's hand as a token of good will.

General Uhler has been head of the steamboat inspection service since 1903, leaving the presidency of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Society to take the place, and since his occupancy of the position has been through several hard fights with various interests. In his earlier years he was a marine engineer himself, serving, however, on the salt water and not on the lakes.

THE LAST CALL

Tomorrow, July 31st, is the last day that you can buy these elegant Suitings at prices less than the cost to manufacture. Undoubtedly you are tired of reading daily, "the whole year round," of merchants that are selling at less than cost. My sales are bona fide. I have only two a year—January and July—but my sales mean much more than I can put in print. The prices that I am giving you for tomorrow are lower than I could have bought them for a month ago. A great many will not believe this statement, but if they will come in I think that when they see the elegant cloths and weights that can be worn in any season, that I can convince them that I am telling only the truth. A man that I sold a year ago and again this year, said that the goods that I sold and at the prices that I am selling, I ought to sell a thousand of them. This man knows a good thing.

Has Your Child a Beautiful Face?

No? Why not? You are a good-looking man and your wife is beautiful. Why should your offspring be uncomely? You say it is their teeth. Dentists claim that this condition is due to neglect. Don't forget the message that I bring you. "I can straighten these ill-shaped teeth and beautify your child."

There is wonderful value in a beautiful face. If you doubt this, ask the man who is looking for a wife.

WHITEHEAD-HOUGH WEDDING THURSDAY

Miss Dorothy Whitehead United in Marriage to Axel Clarence

Hough at Simple Home

Ceremony.

On Thursday afternoon at four o'clock, Miss Dorothy M. Whitehead was united in marriage to Axel Clarence Hough, at the home of the bride's father, 646 South Main street.

Exquisite simplicity marked every detail of the ceremony and the assembly of guests were relatives or friends of long standing.

The home was most tastefully and beautifully decorated for the event

the entrance being flanked by huge baskets of garden flowers and the two lower floors lavishly decorated in a color scheme of white, green, combinations of palms and ferns and marguerites, all massed in profusion or arranged with grace.

Promptly at four-fifty, Hough, or chestra struck up the triumphal march and the bride entered on the arm of her father, preceded by her cousin, Miss Grace Cole of Chicago, maid of honor, Miss Grace Cole of Chicago,

brother of the bride, met them in front of the parlor, where they were met by the bride's father, Axel Hough, and brother-in-law, Russell Fraser, a brother-in-law of the groom, read the Presbyterian marriage service, the orchestra playing the music of the bride and groom. The groom was dressed in a tuxedo and the bride in a white gown of sheer sheer, hand-embroidered Swiss voile, with fillet lace, and she carried the bride's bouquet of roses, maidens'

hair ferns and lilacs of the valley.

Miss Cole wore white lace, with green sash, and all who assisted were dressed in white and green.

Immediately after the ceremony the forty guests sat down to a supper served in buffet style in the dining room by Mrs. Louise Bowerman.

White roses and ferns were the principal decorations in the room, and each course was in harmony with the prevailing white and green.

The orchestra continued to play throughout the feast, and until the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Hough, who left immediately to take the evening train for Chicago. They will spend several weeks visiting in the city and upon their return will take up their residence in the home of the groom on St. Lawrence avenue, which he has recently decorated throughout.

Out of town guests who attended the wedding were Rev. Hugh Russell

Fraser and his daughter, Miss Ethel

Fraser, of Monticello, New York;

Miss Hattie Hough, a sister of the groom, of South Butler, New York;

Miss Florence Halston, of Pontiac,

Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cole, Miss

Grace Cole and Master Charles Cole

of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Whitehead, of Rockford, Illinois; and Rear

Admiral F. M. Symonds, of Chicago,

Wisconsin, who served with Mr.

Whitehead on the Perry Victory Centennial commission.

The bride on Thursday is the daughter of Hon. John M. Whitehead and has made her home in Janesville for the past year, after returning from an extended residence in Italy.

The groom is head of the Chicago

Corporation and is one of the leading business men of the city.

SIDE TALKS

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE SCHEDULE ALL IMPORTANT.
The schedule all important, the detail dominant and the plan preconceived—what a lot of happiness these three factors take out of many women's lives!

A woman was invited by a friend to bring her little boy and take an automobile ride. It was a heavenly day, the ride would have done them both good as well as give pleasure.

"What time shall you be back?" she asked.

"Not until six o'clock," he replied.

"I don't believe I'd better go."

The reason. She wanted to give him a bath and, if he didn't get back until six he would be an hour late in settling down. Couldn't she get so until the next night? No, she had planned to give it that night.

The husband of another woman came home one night full of enthusiasm. They had been planning to take a picnic vacation later in the summer, but he had just been offered the opportunity to take a very interesting trip if they could start in three days.

Her clothes weren't ready.

His wife was annoyed instead of pleased.

"Why didn't you go for a month. I couldn't possibly get off then."

"Why?"

"My clothes aren't ready."

"You'd need very few clothes and I could let you have the money to buy what you absolutely need tomorrow."

"Besides, I haven't the house ready yet. My cleaning isn't finished."

"Leave it the way it is and have Jane help you. Why worry about it?"

So the argument raged. Did they go eventually? No, of course they didn't.

The schedule all important, the detail dominant and the plan preconceived were respected and the opportunity was lost.

It is such things as that that prevent men from making comrades of their wives.

Why Men Don't Make Comrades of Their Wives.

"The reason I like to get off with other men," said a man whose wife complains that he does not make a comrade of her, is that they aren't always fussing over details. They take things as they come and have a good time. Women are always fussing if this or that isn't just the way they expect it to be.

To dominate her plans and schedules instead of permitting them to dominate her, to refuse to permit petty details to change from moloch into mountains—these are the biggest happiness lessons that many a woman has to learn.

Question—I need advice. A very amiable young man has confessed earnestly that he cares for me. I appreciate the honor of the proposal, but desire only his friendship. Can I safely continue our friendship without in the future being called a coquette? I abhor deceit. I am very young and have ambitions which crowd out thoughts of matrimony.—A Reader.

Answer—If you are absolutely sure that you care for this man in the way you are learning to care for someone else? Friendship would be ideal if it were not for that and if you could make him know your decision was final, and if he could be satisfied with the friendship, but these are very big ifs as people who have tried the experiment can tell you.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MISS EVA LEONARD

"Have a doughnut, Dick," Neil held the plate temptingly in front of him.

"No, thank you," he replied absently.

"Don't you like them? I think they are extra fine this time," urged Neil.

"They are all right, but I feel nutty enough as it is."

"Perhaps he'll like them better with his coffee for breakfast," she thought; and she placed the plate of doughnuts on the table.

"I'm not going to eat any of them," Dick said, looking at the good food, resolved Neil, so the doughnuts appeared regally, but they were coldly received.

Dick got tired of seeing them hanging before his eyes, while Neil ostentatiously ate one at every sitting. It occurred to him that it would be kind to Neil's digestion to hide the things until their usefulness as food was unquestionably passed, but though he put them behind the door in the cupboard, he smiled at Neil, and at the next meal, Dick looked at Neil, but she was innocently eating doughnuts and talking of the next time.

"I'll bet you can't find them the next time," he thought, his lips a firm line.

This time he took them to the cellar and hid them in the bottom of a basket of apples. They did not appear at breakfast, and Dick was visibly delighted.

"Never mind, I'll find them before supper tonight," my dear," thought Neil; and she did. Like Banquo's ghost they appeared at the feast.

Nothing was said, but that made the game all the more exciting. Neil took the doughnuts to the pantry and hid them in an empty pickle jar, so closely did she guard the entrance to it.

Neil looked at Dick and pretended he wanted some peppermint after he went to bed in order to get a chance to hunt them up.

"You've been eating too many doughnuts, dear," said Neil with deep sympathy in her tones. He found them after a little hunt. Neil, while calling helpfully to tell him where the peppermint was and offering in sugared tones to help him find it.

"No, thank you, dear; I would not have you inconvenienced on account of my craving," he replied as he wrapped the offending cakes in a cloth and returned to the bedroom, stuffed them in a corner of the closet, pausing to see that Dick had been nowhere else and the order was their presence. She promptly put them on the breakfast table. When Dick came in Neil said with perfect composure:

"Have a doughnut with your coffee."

"No, thank you. Jenks brings our coffee today; he might need them to block his wagon wheel."

When Neil left the room to replenish the muffin plate he softly opened the window and dropped them out. He was absorbed in the morning paper when she returned.

Neil wasted a good hour going through everything in the dining room before she happened to see the muddy round the window.

"You don't win this game as easily as this, Mr. Dick," she said aloud, and tiptoeing over the soft sand she washed them and they again stared at Dick at dinner.

He leaned against the wall in token of weak surrender when came in. Neil laughed in triumph. But after he had finished his dessert he took the plate and going through the kitchen to the shed reappeared carrying a spade. He dug a hole in the garden, dumped in the doughnuts and covered them up. On returning to the kitchen he said solemnly to Neil:

"We are now called to mourn the departed doughnuts."

"We guess they are really gone this time," she laughed.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MISS ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you tell me what you think I should do? We have been married seven years. My husband is forty-one, my little girl is six and I am twenty-eight.

My husband is a good worker and makes good wages, but he thinks all I need is to sit and eat. All he thinks of is to gamble and to spend his wages. Some weeks he will gamble every cent he makes and then it will take weeks to get caught up. Then he does it all over again. The first years of our married life, when he would take his pay and be gone all night or two days and nights, I would not scold him at all, but I would cry until I was sick.

Now I tell him that I will leave him if he doesn't do better. He tells me to get my trunk and go. My people never come to see us any more, because he is so cross when he comes. My mother and father live about sixteen miles from here. He quarrels for a week when I want to go home. I only go about two or three times a year.

Mrs. Thompson, would it be best for me to take my little girl and go and get a place as housekeeper for some one, or just grin and bear it? I am a good cook and worker.

Leave your husband and then sue for alimony. You need not get a divorce unless you wish to. If your husband were more reasonable, you could make arrangements to have his wages paid to you, but I am afraid this plan will be impossible in your case. For your child's sake, you ought to better home conditions.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am twenty-four years old and I have been engaged to a young man my own age for three years. We have not married because he has not enough money. Lately he has been doing very well and he decided that it would be safe to marry this fall. A few weeks ago I met a young man who has just recently come to town. The first time I saw him was not greatly impressed, but after a short time I began to feel that he has the personality I have ever known. You only have to look at him to know that he can be depended upon, and he is so reserved and powerful. This man has come to see me several times, but he has shown no sign that he is engaged to me. He knows that I am engaged, but he comes anyway because he is a friend of father's, and just comes to see the family. I have not told the man I am engaged to, but I am afraid to. I am in a strange position. I love the friend of father's, but I have no reason to think he cares for me. He has taught me, though, that I can never be happy with the man I am engaged to, but I cannot break my marriage now, if refusing to mean that I would be an old maid all my life. What can I do? The man I am engaged to loves me deeply and he does not realize how I feel. It seems to me that I cannot break my engagement and be honorable. And I do hate to make him as unhappy as I am sure to. He is such a fine man and has been such a good friend.

TOUBLED.

You cannot honorably marry a man whom you do not love when he thinks you do love him. Tell him the truth and I am sure he will release you. I hope for your sake that your father's friend does care for you. He may be hiding his true feeling for you because of your engagement.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of seventeen and I want to ask you for advice. My parents will consent to my going with boys if they are nice. I know a boy who is nineteen years old who is a real nice boy and I would like to go with him. One of my girl friends told him about me and he said he wanted to get acquainted with me because he thought he would like to go with me. Please do not mistake me for a forward girl, because I am decent. He saw me once, but he doesn't know me now when he meets me, but I know him. What would be the best way for me to get acquainted with him? Will he think it bad of me if he hears that I want to go with him, or not?

ERRATA BLUE EYES.

Let boys try to get acquainted with you and never take the initiative yourself. I am afraid you have made a mistake in this case and the boy will have no desire to know you.

PILGRIM HATS NOW FOR MODERN MISSES

Used Old Style Hats to Perch Upon a 1915 Head.—Material is Only Difference.

(By Margaret Mason.)

And now some Pilgrim's Progress. Has been made in modern style. Since Hattie wears a Pilgrim hat, it's good for quite a smile.

Have you seen the quaint Pilgrim hats that all the dear girls are wearing? They are nothing more nor less than replicas of the chapeau John Alden wore when he wooed the fair Pocahontas. Broad of brim with a high conical crown that is fastened over before it attains to a perfect peak, they are certainly a distinct novelty when perched on a perky 1915 head. Now it has the modern maid cast aside right sprightly, a Pilgrim which she declared looked as if it had come out of the Ark. And yet here she is exuberantly pleased to flaunt a hat that came over in the Mayflower. The only difference between the 1915 Pilgrim hats and the original models is the material in which they are developed. The only difference between the 1915 Pilgrim hats and the original models is the material in which they are developed. John Alden wore broad of brim with a high conical crown that is fastened over before it attains to a perfect peak, they are certainly a distinct novelty when perched on a perky 1915 head. Now it has the modern maid cast aside right sprightly, a Pilgrim which she declared looked as if it had come out of the Ark. And yet here she is exuberantly pleased to flaunt a hat that came over in the Mayflower. DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Of Course Grace Was Jealous—

"We broke up in a row," laughed Jim Sargent. "Clark and Chisholm were willing to accept your price, but the rest of us listened to Doctor Boyd and Nicholas Van Ploon, and fell. We insist on our cathedral, and Doctor Boyd's plan seems the best way to get it, though even that may necessitate a four or five years' delay."

"What's his plan?" asked Allison.

"Rebuilding," returned Sargent. "We can put up tenements good enough to pass the building inspectors and to last fifteen years. With the same rents we are now receiving, we can offer them better quarters, and as Doctor Boyd suggested, redeem ourselves from some of the disgrace of this whole proceeding. Clever, sensible idea, I think."

Gail was leaning forward, with her fingers clasped around her knee; her brown eyes had widened, and a little red spot had appeared in either cheek; her red lips were half parted, as she looked up in wonder at her Uncle Jim.

"Is that the plan upon which they have decided?" and Allison looked at his watch.

"Well, hardly," frowned Sargent. "We couldn't swing Clark and Chisholm. At the last minute they suggested that we might build lots, and the impending fracas seemed too serious to take up just now, so we've tabled the whole thing."

Allison smiled, and slipped his watch back in his pocket.

"It's fairly definite, however, that you won't sell," he concluded.

"Not at your figure," laughed Sargent. "If we took your money, Doctor Boyd would be too old to preach in the new cathedral."

"He'll pull it through some way," declared Allison. "He's as smart as a whip."

Neither gentleman had noticed Gail. She had settled back in her chair during these last speeches, weary and listless, and overcome with a sense of some humiliation too evasive to be properly framed even in thought. She had a sense that she had given away something vastly precious, and which would never be valued. Neither did they notice that she changed suddenly to relief. She had been justified in her decision.

She took the reins of conversation herself after Uncle Jim had left, and determined Allison so brightly that he left with impatience at the tea party which monopolized her.

Later, when Rev. Smith Boyd dropped in, he met with a surprising and disconcerting vivacity. In his eyes there were pain and suffering, and inexpressible hunger, but in hers there was only dancing frivolity; a little too ebullient, perhaps, if he had been wise enough to know; but he was not.

The study door was open when late that evening Houston Van Ploon so deately escorted Mrs. Davies and Gail into the library, one of those rooms which appoint themselves the instinctive lounging places of all family intimates. Gail turned up her big eyes in sparkling acknowledgment as the sanctimonious Van Ploon took her cloak, and at that moment, as she stood gracefully poised, she caught the gaze of Rev. Smith Boyd fixed on her with such infinite longing that it distressed her. She did not want him to suffer. Uncle Jim strode out with a hearty greeting, and at the sound of the voices of no one but Gail and Mrs. Davies and Houston Van Ploon, old "Daddy" Manning appeared in the doorway, followed by the rector.

"The sweetest flower that blows in any dale," quoted "Daddy" Manning, patting Gail's hand affectionately.

The rector stood by, waiting to greet her, after Manning had monopolized her a selfish moment, and the newly aroused eye for color in him seized upon the gold and blue and red of her straight Egyptian costume, and recognized in them a part of her endless variety. The black on her lashes. He was close enough to see that; and he marveled at himself that he could not disapprove.

Gail was most uncomfortably aware of him in this nearness; but she turned to him with a frank smile or friendship.

"This looks like a conspiracy," she commented, glancing towards the study, which was thick with smoke.

"It's an offensively innocent one," returned Manning, giving the rector but small chance. "We're discussing plans for the new Vedder court tenements."

"Oh!" observed Gail, and radiated a distinct chill, whereupon Rev. Smith Boyd, divesting himself of some courteous compliment, exchanged inane adieux with Mrs. Davies and young Van Ploon, and took his committee back into the study.

Mrs. Davies remained but a moment or so. She even seemed eager to retire, and as she left the library, she cast a hopeful backward glance at the dancing-eyed Gail and the correct young Van Ploon, who, with his Dutch complexion and his blonde English mustache and his stalwart American body, to say nothing of his being a Van Ploon, represented to her the ideal of masculine perfection. He was an eligible who never did anything a second too early or a second too late, or deviated by one syllable from the exact things he should say.

If the anxious Aunt Helen had counted on any important results from this evening's opportunities, she had not taken into her calculations the adroitness of Gail. In precisely five minutes Van Ploon was on the doorstep, with his Inverness on his shoulders and his silk hat in his hand, without even having approached the elaborate introduction to certain important remarks he had definitely decided to make. Gail might not have been able to rid herself of him so easily, for he was a person of considerable momentum, but he had rather planned to make a more deliberate ceremony of the matter, impulsive opportunities not being in his line of thought.

A tall young man in an Inverness walked rapidly past the door while Van Ploon was saying the correctly clever things in the way of adieu; and before she had closed the door on Van Ploon, Dick Rodley walked into the house with careless assurance.

"Gracious, Dick, you can't come in!" protested Gail, with half-frowning, half-laughing remonstrance. "It's a fearful hour for calls."

"I'm a friend of the family," insisted Dick, calmly closing the door behind him and hanging his hat on the rack. "I guess you've forgotten the program."

"Oh, yes, the proposal. Well, have it over with."

"All right," he agreed, and taking her arm and tucking her shoulder comfortably close to him, he walked easily with her back to the library. Arrived there, he seated her on her favorite chair, and drew up another one squarely in front of her.

"I'm going to shock you to death," he told her. "I'm going to propose so seriously to you."

Some laughing retort was on her lips, but she caught a look in his eyes which suddenly stopped her.

"I am very much in earnest about it, Gail," and his voice bore the stamp of deep sincerity. "I love you. I want you to be my wife."

"Dick," protested Gail, and it was she who reached out and placed her hand in his. The action was too confidently frank for him to mistake it.

"I was afraid you'd think that way about it," he said, his voice full of a pain of which they neither one had believed him capable. "This is the first time I ever proposed, except in fun, and I want to make you take me seriously. Gail, I've said so many pretty things to you, that now, when I am in such desperate earnest, there's nothing left but just to tell you how much I love you; how much I want you!" He stopped, and, holding her hand, patting it gently with unconscious tenderness, he gazed earnestly into her eyes. His own were entirely without that burning glow which he had, for so long, bestowed on all the young and beautiful. They were almost somber now, and in their depth was a humble wisdom which made Gail's heart glow out to him.

"I can't Dick," she told him, smiling affectionately at him. "You're the dearest boy in the world, and I want you for my friend as long as we live; for my very dear friend!"

No studied her in silence for a moment, and then he put his hands on her cheeks, and drew her gently towards him. Still smiling into his eyes, she held up her lips, and he kissed her.

"I'd like to say something jolly before I go," he said as he rose; "but I can't seem to think of it."

Gail laughed, but there was a trace of moisture in her eyes as she took his arm.

"I'd like to help you out, Dick, but I can't think of it either," she returned.

She was crying a little when she went up the stairs, and her mood was not even interrupted by the fact that Aunt Helen's door was ajar, and that Aunt Helen stood just beyond the crack.

"Why, child, that Egyptian black is running," was Aunt Helen's first observation.

Gail dabbed hastily at the two tiny rivulets which had hesitated at the curve of her pink cheeks, and then she put her head on Aunt Helen's shoulder, and wept softly.

"Poor Dicky," she explained, and then turning, disappeared into her own room.

Mrs. Helen Davies looked after her speculatively for a moment; but she decided not to follow.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Maker of Maps.

There began to be strange new stirrings in the world. Money! From the land which was its home and place of abode it leaned over across the wide seas, and made potent whisperings in the ears of the countries where money is despised and held vulgar. They all listened. The particular potency lay in the fact that the money was so big, which took away tremendously from its despicableness and its vulgarity.

A black-bearded grand duke, from the wide land of the frozen seas, humbled himself to plain Ivan Strolecky at the sound of that whisper, and hurried westward. A high dignitary of an empire upon which the sun never sets hid his title under a plebeian nom de plume, and stalked stolidly away westward to that whisper of despised American money. From the land of fashion, from the land of toys, from the land of art and music, from the land of cherry blossoms, from the land of the drowsing drug, from the land of the flashing jewels, from the lands of the burning sands and the lands of the midnight sun, there came the highest of power; and they all, light and swarth, and bearded and smooth, and large and small, and robed and tattered, centered toward the city of strong men, and, one by one, presented themselves, in turn, to a grave and silent, kinky-haired old dandy by the name of Ephraim.

One motive alone had dragged them over sterile plains and snowy mountains and bounding seas; the magic whisper of Money!

Through Ephraim they came to the stocky, square-shouldered, square-faced chess player who was called Allison. They found him pleasant, agreeable, but hardly of their class. He was so forceful as to be necessarily more or less crude, and he had an unpleasant fashion of waving aside all the decent little pretenses about money. That was the fault of this whole rude country, where luxury had been brought to the greatest refinement ever known in the history of the world; it was so devoted to money, and the cultured gentlemen did their best to get all they could.

To Ivan Strolecky Allison was frank and friendly, for there was something in the big Russian which was different from those others, so he hastened to have business out of the way.

"Here are your lines," he said, spreading down a map which had been brought up to date by hand. "The ones I want are checked in blue. The others I do not care for."

The grand duke looked them over with a keen eye.

"I am rather disappointed," he confessed, in excellent English. "I had understood that you wished to control our entire railway system."

"I do," asserted Allison; "but I don't wish to pay out money for them all. If I can acquire the lines I have marked, the others will be controlled quite easily from the fact that I shall have the only outlet."

The grand duke, who had played poker in America and fan-tan in China and roulette in Monte Carlo, and all the other games throughout the world, smiled with his impressive big eyes, and put his hand up under his beard.

"The matter then seems to resolve itself into a question of price," he commented.

"No; protection," responded Allison. "If I were buying these railroads outright, I should expect my property interests to be guarded, even if I had to appeal to international equity; but I am not."

"No," admitted the grand duke. "They cannot be purchased."

"The proposition resolves itself then into a matter of virtual commercial seizure," Allison pointed out.

The grand duke, still with his hand in his beard, chuckled, as he regarded Allison amusedly.

"I shall not mind if you call it piracy," he observed. "We, in Russia, must collect our revenues as we can, and we are as frank as Americans about it. Returning to your matter of protection, I shall admit that the only agreement upon which we can secure what you want, would not hold in international equity; and, in consequence, the only protection I can give you is my personal word that you will not be molested in anything which you wish to do, providing it is pleasant to myself and those I represent."

"Then we'll make it an annual payment," decided Allison, putting away some figures he had prepared. "We'll make it a sliding scale, increasing each year with the earnings."

The grand duke considered that proposition gravely, and offered an amendment.

"After the first year," he said. "We shall begin with a large bonus, however."

Allison again put out of his mind certain figures he had prepared to suggest. Apparently the grand duke needed a large supply of immediate cash, and the annual payments thereafter would need to be decreased accordingly, with still another percentage deducted for profit on the duke's necessities.

MILWAUKEE SUFFERER TRIED JUST ONE DOSE

Ben Behling Gave Up Hope Before He Found Remedy—Happy Now.

Ben F. Behling of 959 Louis avenue, Milwaukee, was a sufferer from maladies of the stomach and digestive tract for a long time. He gave up hope.

At last he discovered May's Wonderful Remedy. He took a dose just to try it. The results were remarkable. He wrote:

"I was in such bad condition that I had given up hope of ever getting well again. I sent to you for one dose of your remedy and took it the same day you sent it. It has worked wonderfully. I took five more bottles, one each week. I am now a new man again. I thank you a thousand times for the good you did me."

May's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.

Dinner Stories

When the spinster aunt began to ask questions she always kept at least one person engaged with little chance for any other word than direct answer.

"What's become of that kitten you had last time I was here?" she demanded of her small nephew. "I hope she wasn't poisoned like the other you had, two years ago."

"No, she—"

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES ALL HER LIFE

But Miss Ayres Got a "Beautiful Complexion" at a Cost of Only $2.00

Nov. 23, 1914.—"All my life my face was covered completely with a mass of pimples, blackheads and blotches. I spent a lot of money on numerous remedies and treatments without success and no relief at all. I tried so many things that I was afraid my case could not be cured. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap seemed to do me good right from the first. I used two jars of Resinol Ointment and some Resinol Soap, the total cost being only $2.00, and this completely cured my case. My skin is without a blemish and I am the possessor of a beautiful complexion."

(Signed) Mabel Ayres, Stone Mountain, Va.

Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and physicians have prescribed them for twenty years in the treatment of eczema and other tormenting skin troubles.

"Don't tell me she was drowned." "No, she—"

"Stolen?" "No, she—"

"Well, I'd like to know what made you give away such a handsome kitten."

"We didn't—she's—"

"Well, that's happened to her—spunk up!"

"She's grown into a cat!" gasped the boy.

Wilson Barrett, the celebrated actor, used to tell an amusing story against himself. At a time when he had a lot of workmen redecorating his private residence, thinking to give them a treat, he asked if, after work one evening they would like to have seats to go and see him play in "The Lights of London," at the Princess theater. They said they didn't mind if they did, and, being complimentary tickets, all went on a Saturday night to see their employer's performance.

At the end of the week Barrett's eye caught sight of this item against each workman's name on the pay sheet: "Saturday night. Four hours overtime at Princess theater, eight shillings."

Colds Always Infectious.

Colds are catching; every now and then the papers tell of epidemics of colds. Then look out for the man who talks thick, and who is constantly sneezing, blowing his nose and making a general nuisance of himself. Sore throats should be treated until they are cured. Adenoids and inflamed tonsils are a fruitful soil for the catarrh germs; in children especially they ought to be removed.

Think Brightness.

Brightness and happiness in the mind bring brightness and happiness in our lives. The future is but the reflection of our present thoughts. We can bring either sunshine or darkness in the future by thinking bright or gloomy now. So let the model of our futures be full of light and joy if we are to insure these qualities for ourselves.

My Wash Just Looks Lovely—I Used "SKITCH"

Don't Rub Your Clothes on a Wash Board Any More—"SKITCH" Saves All the Work and Makes Your Clothes Look Grand

"Away with the antiquated washboard, women! A ten-cent package of SKITCH saves the infernal rub, rub, rubbing of clothes and makes your clothes look fine. I tell all my neighbors what the washing SKITCH does, proudly say Mrs. Mrs. Miller, Cedarville, Ill. 'I could not wash without it any more.'"

Get a 10-cent package of SKITCH of your grocer and smash your washboard to pieces. Just use three teaspoons of SKITCH to a boiler of clothes, then stir and rest while SKITCH does the dirt out of the clothes, one-two-three. A 10-cent package of SKITCH does seven washings and saves 10 cents' worth of soap on every one. If your grocer doesn't have SKITCH, send me his name and I'll send you a sample free. WAR CORRESPONDENTS GIVE AC-

AFTER YEAR'S FIGHT.

GERMANY STRONGEST

Germany From Several Standpoints
Appears to Have Suffered Less Than France or England.

(By Carl W. Ackerman.)

Berlin, July 30.—Germany's assets after a year's warfare can be summed up thus:

Possession of Russian Poland, Belgium and Northern France—territory as large and rich as New England and New York.

The Netherlands entirely free of the enemy, save for a small strip of western Alsace.

Powerful and active submarine and Zeppelin fleets.

A tradition for the navy. An army still capable of offensive operations everywhere in the war theater. And hundreds of thousands of men capable of bearing arms, not yet called to the colors.

Finances unimpaired—the only belated which has not borrowed heavily, opened up the country, and which has neither declared a moratorium or cancelled public debts.

A million citizens in neutral lands ready to return home and help Germany recuperate after the war.

Territory practically undamaged by the ravages of war.

Germany's losses during the year's struggle are:

Over one-half of her colonial empire captured.

All her overseas commerce temporarily destroyed.

Two hundred and fifty thousand soldiers killed.

Expenditure of about $2,500,000,000.

The war has given Germany these heroes:

The Kaiser.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg, who won the battle of the Marston Lakes.

Frederic East Prussia from the Slavs and picked the bubble of Russia's invulnerable might.

Gen. von Haeseler, who led the German rush into France.

Lieut. von Linden, who with 15 men captured a fort at Namur.

Belgium, without firing a shot and vermined the Germans to begin the rout of the allies.

Commander Otto Weddigen of the submarine U-20, who sank four British cruisers.

Captain von Muencke, who finally met his death when his submarine was sunk by a British ship flying the Swedish flag.

ty from the Emden safely back to Berlin, after the Emden was sunk.

Admiral von Spee, who sank one British cruiser and a merchant ship, fought with his own squadron of the Falklands until ships and crews went to the bottom, rather than surrender.

The naval heroes equal those of the army. Germany believes the tradition established for her navy by the courage and ability of her sailors during the past year.

The most valuable benefits the war has conferred on her. The men who have died for sea for the fatherland will have their names inscribed on imperishable rolls as a new inspiration for the Empire. When the present war broke out the German navy was an untried instrument. It had learned all it knew of sea-fighting by maneuvers and study.

British Not Equal.

The war has demonstrated conclusively to Germany that man for man the English, with all their centuries of sea-fighting, are not the equals of the Germans. One of the major surprises of the war is the comparative inefficiency of England's naval commanders. The manner in which Admiral Cradock allowed himself to be outmaneuvered in the Chilean Coast.

Admiral Beatty's defeat of the Dardanelles, and the disputes of the admiralty in London, culminating in the open inquiry of the House of Commons, are all beloved by the Germans as representative incidents, showing British naval prestige has been permanently injured.

The German submarines are the most potent causes of German optimism as a new year of warfare begins. The Germans don't expect their undersea boats to destroy the English navy or so to reduce it as to permit the German high seas fleet to venture forth to battle. This belief did prevail for a short time after Admiral Beatty's victory at the North Sea, but it is no longer held. Nevertheless the operations against England's merchant fleet are considered the second only in importance to undersea attacks against warships themselves.

The Germans are convinced that the submarines have demoralized the British government. That is why the government will not abandon its submarine policy, no matter how long the war may go on.

Admiral Beatty's defeat of the Dardanelles, and the disputes of the admiralty in London, culminating in the open inquiry of the House of Commons, are all beloved by the Germans as representative incidents, showing British naval prestige has been permanently injured.

The German submarines are the most potent causes of German optimism as a new year of warfare begins. The Germans don't expect their undersea boats to destroy the English navy or so to reduce it as to permit the German high seas fleet to venture forth to battle. This belief did prevail for a short time after Admiral Beatty's victory at the North Sea, but it is no longer held. Nevertheless the operations against England's merchant fleet are considered the second only in importance to undersea attacks against warships themselves.

The Germans are convinced that the submarines have demoralized the British government. That is why the government will not abandon its submarine policy, no matter how long the war may go on.

(By William Philip Simms)

Paris, July 30.—One day ago tomorrow the general mobilization order was posted in France calling the men to the colors. This was war. Today her leaders consider the crisis.

Admiral Beatty's defeat of the Dardanelles, and the disputes of the admiralty in London, culminating in the open inquiry of the House of Commons, are all beloved by the Germans as representative incidents, showing British naval prestige has been permanently injured.

The German submarines are the most potent causes of German optimism as a new year of warfare begins. The Germans don't expect their undersea boats to destroy the English navy or so to reduce it as to permit the German high seas fleet to venture forth to battle. This belief did prevail for a short time after Admiral Beatty's victory at the North Sea, but it is no longer held. Nevertheless the operations against England's merchant fleet are considered the second only in importance to undersea attacks against warships themselves.

shatter the French army, caught off its guard by a "brisk attack" the Kaiser's forces are helpless now. For not only has France recovered from the shock of the first year's struggle alone to receive it, but it has now at the start of the war. The English are daily increasing in number and the Russian avalanche is considered near the end of the line.

Question of Time.

Any Frenchman, or Frenchwoman will tell you it is only a question of time.

France has astonished the world by her staying qualities, by her unanimity of purpose and by her accomplishments. Here are some of her deeds during the first year of the war.

She accomplished her own soldierly.

She frustrated Germany's original plan of campaign.

She won the victory of the Marne, saving Paris.

She defeated the German attempt to take the English Channel ports and other English Channel ports.

She forced the Germans to accept either retirement from France and the English Channel ports, or a winter campaign in the trenches.

She completed the reorganization of her army, under way when war caught her.

She made an army of individuals, temperamentalists and thinkers into an army of tenacious veterans, two-to-one more efficient than at the outset of the war.

She banished the ghost of 1870.

She learned to fight as the other fellow fights; by burrowing.

She took part of Alsace, her lost province.

She stopped the Crown Prince at Verdun.

She held Nancy, the eastern gate to Paris.

She created heavy artillery, lacking at the start.

She ousted shirkers from safe positions back of the line and sent them to the trenches; and brought out of the trenches mechanics, engineers and others needed for war material factories.

She sent a large expeditionary force to the Dardanelles.

She bottled up the Austrian fleet in the Adriatic just as England bottled the German fleet at Kiel, keeping the Mediterranean open.

She launched all war financial measures.

She abolished absinthe and put other intoxicants under control.

She provided for the families of her soldiers.

She cared for her own refugees and provided homes and nourishment for Belgians.

She freed women in men's jobs and kept the economic life of the country going.

She kept calm despite invasion of her territory; backed her soldiers with a patient, untiring, united citizenry; and much to her credit, has yet to utter the first word of criticism against any one of her allies.

France has never so calm as now.

She has suffered and still suffers cruelly—but she has not complained. Her feeling runs too deep for outward show, this revealing a little known trait of her people.

Judging by what France has accomplished during the first year of the war, and by her present deadly calm, the powers of central Europe have a hot time in store for the second year of the war, which begins Sunday.

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

London, July 29.—England starts up the second year of the Great War with decided advantage over her position of twelve months ago.

She has command of the seas. She has an army, trained and in training, of nearly three million men. Her expeditionary force in France is now firmly entrenched in a position regarded as impregnable, even if the prospect of making a successful general offensive movements is not immediate. Her airmen have established beyond a question their superiority in skill and daring over those of the enemy. She has at last begun with all the resources at her command, material and human, to manufacture a prodigious quantity of arms and ammunition—of the right sort. She has back of her a united nation and a united empire.

The war found her unprepared not only from the military standpoint, but politically. The liberal government was apparently right for a while. There had been all but mutiny in the army. The Irish had become more than a nuisance. Sir Edward Carson had established his Provisional Government of Ulster, and revolution was in sight. India was seething with sedition. Ever Canada had signs of drifting of the restraint of mother's apron strings. Industrial unrest was at its height. Altogether things were in a very bad way.

Troubles Disappear.

Now most of these troubles have disappeared. Some of them have longer than others, it is true. It has been a year of readjustment. Liberals and conservatives, radicals and Tories, now live in the same breath. So far as the Irish disaffection, upon which the Kaiser counted so fondly—thanks to the lack of understanding on the part of his cabinet—has been concerned, that vanished almost overnight. It was a short way from Tipperary. Sir Edward Carson, whom they were about to lock up in the Tower, is now attorney general of Great Britain, and John Redmond could be in the cabinet if he wanted to. One hundred and twenty-five thousand Irishmen have joined the king's army. Nationalists and unionists—5,000 of the former and 50,000 of the latter—instead of drenching Ireland with each other's blood are fighting side by side under the Union Jack.

Canada heard the call to arms and responded at once with 33,000 men whom she has been adding regularly since then. They are serving in the trenches along with Gurkhas from India, Australians and New Zealanders together with Britishmen and Scotsmen are engaged in the Dardanelles in one of the most valiant campaigns in the history of warfare. The sporadic uprising in South Africa has been suppressed and the great mass of Boers against whom England conducted her unrighteous war fifteen years ago, with General Botha at their head, have joined their forces in the conflict.

Realize the Facts.

There has been much talk of conscription of late. Both military and industrial. The leaders of the nation still believe England can do without either, and if the recent response to the call of the country is any criterion, they are right. But they are prepared for conscription, that should prove to be the only solution. The national register scheme looks as if it were a step in that direction. The machinery for conscription is to be created, but only to be utilized in the gravest emergency.

Although she has lost her cocksureness, England has by no means lost hope. She realizes now that the struggle may be long and desperate. But the longer the better for her and her allies in the end. Military writers, many of them, say Germany has now reached the end of her rope. Her efficiency, while England has only got a good start toward that goal.

The boundless resources of the British Empire still lie upon England. She believes ultimate victory will be hers. If the spirit that now dominates England continues, the war will be a long one, but the odds are in favor of England and her allies.

BECKER'S FIGHT FOR LIFE ENDED TODAY IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Amplification of these charges followed daily from then until June 14 when Rosenthal made an affidavit of his charges, which was published in New York newspapers. The next day he agreed to go before the grand jury the following day and tell what he knew of New York's police graft. History of Crime.

Shortly after midnight of the 16th Rosenthal was eating a late supper in the grill room of the Hotel Metropolitan in Forty-third street, just off Broadway. A young man, whose identity never was clearly established, appeared at the door and beckoned him. Rosenthal was afraid his enemies would "get him," for he had confided as much to District Attorney Whitman when he made his affidavit, but he rose from the table and went out the door.

As he stepped from the door into the street, his frame silhouetted against the brilliantly lighted hotel interior, four men standing on the curb, fired simultaneously and the gambler dropped to the sidewalk. His death was instantaneous.

The murderers ran across the street, jumped into a long grey car, the engine of which was running, and were whirled away while the crowd was gasping. Everything was confusion, but a citizen glimpsed the number on the car in the melee, and on this thread that District Attorney Whitman built the case that he sent five men to their death.

The next day, vigorously prodded by the New York papers, the police arrested Willie Shapiro and a man named Libby, owners of the car. From them they drew that a gambler named Jack Rose had hired the machine. "Bridge" Weber was arrested the same day, on suspicion, and the next day Jack Rose, who had been "laying low" was taken.

Rose admitted he had hired the car and collected the four gunmen, "Gyp the Blood," "Lefty Louis," "Dago Frank" and "Whitey Lewis," members of "Big Jack" Zelig's East Side gang.

Then began the round-up of the gunmen. "Dago Frank" was the first arrested, and on August 1, "Whitey Lewis" was found hiding in the Catskill mountains. "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louis" were not arrested until late in September.

Becker indicted. In the meantime, Becker had been indicted for murder, due to the confessions of "Bald Jack" Rose, "Bridge" Weber and Harry Valon, who also had been taken for his value as a witness. It was not until a month after Becker was indicted that murder indictments were returned against "Gyp the Blood," "Lefty Louis," "Dago Frank," "Whitey Lewis," "Jack" Sullivan and Willie Shapiro. The last two got out of the mess because of their work in aiding the state, and because they were not directly implicated in the killing of Rosenthal.

CHRONOLOGY OF BECKER CASE.

1912.

July 11.—Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, accused Becker publicly of grafting.

July 15.—Rosenthal shot to death as he stepped from the door of the Metropolitan Hotel in West Forty-third street, shortly before 2 o'clock in the morning.

July 25.—Becker indicted. "Bald Jack" Rose, "Bridge" Weber, and Harry Valon confessed.

Aug. 20.—"Gyp the Blood" Horowitz, "Lefty Louis" Rosenberg, "Dago Frank" Cirofici, "Whitey Lewis," "Jack" Sullivan, and William Shapiro indicted for murder.

Oct. 6.—"Big Jack" Zelig, alleged to have hired the gunmen who murdered Rosenthal, shot to death on Second Avenue.

Oct. 7.—Becker's trial begins before Justice Goff in Supreme Court.

Oct. 24.—Becker convicted of murder in the first degree.

Oct. 30.—Becker sentenced to die in Sing Sing's electric chair during week of December 8.

Nov. 19.—"Gyp the Blood," "Lefty Louis," "Dago Frank" and "Whitey Lewis" convicted of murder in first degree and sentenced to be electrocuted.

Dec. 1.—Becker's case appealed, the appeal acting as a stay of execution.

Feb. 24.—Court of Appeals set aside verdict on Becker and ordered a new trial. Affirmed verdict in others.

Apr. 18.—Four gunmen electrocuted at Sing Sing prison.

May 6.—Becker's new trial begins.

May 22.—Becker again convicted of murder in the first degree.

May 23.—Becker again sentenced to die in electric chair.

1915.

May 25.—Court of Appeals affirms Becker's second conviction.

June 18.—Court of Appeals denies motion to reargue appeal.

With all the principals safely lodged behind the bars District Attorney Whitman began gathering the mass of evidence. Sleuths were put on Becker's past and his whole life.

The investigators found money in various New York banks in Becker's name, aggregating in all to between $75,000 and $100,000. This was one of the strongest links in the District Attorney's chain, as it tended to corroborate Rose's graft revelations.

Becker attempted to explain the money by saying it was the accumulation of years of saving by he and his wife, but the agents discovered that Becker had been divorced, disproving his story.

Zelig Shot Down.

On October 6, the day before Becker was put on trial, "Big Jack" Zelig, famous East side gunman, and "boss" of the four that murdered Rosenthal, was shot to death in Second Avenue by a gangster.

Becker went to trial the next day before Justice Goff. In three weeks, on Oct. 30, the jury returned a verdict "guilty in the first degree."

Becker was convicted mainly on the testimony of Jack Rose, about the now famous "Harlem Conference." In that conference, Rose swore, he met Becker at 124th street and Seventh avenue, on the night of June 27, and Becker promised him and his pals immunity if they would put Rosenthal out of the way. The testimony of Weber and Valon corroborated Rose's statements. It was further corroborated by a negro named Marshall, in no way connected with the case, who said he saw Rose and Becker talking on that corner that night.

After his conviction, which he took with remarkable composure, Becker was sentenced to die on Dec. 8. An appeal saved him, however, as it acted as a stay of execution.

Nov. 19.—"Gyp the Blood," "Lefty Louis," "Dago Frank" and "Whitey Lewis" were found guilty of murder in the first degree and were sentenced to be electrocuted.

Little of importance occurred in the cases during 1915. There were sporadic outbursts of activity, but nothing definite developed.

Becker spent all this time in the death house at Sing Sing, year after year, the four gunmen were awaiting death. His iron nerve never faltered. Neither did those of his four hirlings.

Hope Swept Away.

It was Feb. 24 before a rift in the clouds revealed a chance to escape the chair. On that date the Court of Appeals set aside the verdict and ordered a re-trial. The same court, however, as a part of the same ruling, affirmed the death sentence of the four gunmen, and they were electrocuted in Sing Sing on April 18, after every means to save their lives had been exhausted.

Becker was jubilant over his new trial. He could not see anything but that he would be acquitted.

On May 6, he was again put on trial for murder, this time before Justice Seabury. Sixteen days later he again stood before the bar and heard a re-trial. The same court, however, as a part of the same ruling, affirmed the death sentence of the four gunmen, and they were electrocuted in Sing Sing on April 18, after every means to save their lives had been exhausted.

HOW KAISER ADOPTED MAXIM MACHINE GUN

Emperor On Seeing Wonder in Action Decides They and They Alone Are For German Army.

(Special to this Gazette)

London, July 30 (By Mail).—How Emperor Wilhelm foresaw twenty years ago the possibilities of the Maxim gun, now so prominent in war reports, and ordered vast quantities of this death-dealing weapon, was told here today for the first time by Sir Hiram Maxim, the aged American inventor.

Today the German army has approximately 55,000 of these machine guns and the British government and other governments are making them as fast as they can, all of which prove that the day of the single shot rifle is past in modern warfare, says Sir Hiram.

It was Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, later King Edward, who called the Kaiser's attention to the Maxim gun, says the inventor. The King was on a visit to his Imperial nephew when one day he inquired casually of Wilhelm if he had chanced to notice the Kaiser's attention to the Maxim gun, says the inventor. The King was on a visit to his Imperial nephew when one day he inquired casually of Wilhelm if he had chanced to notice the Kaiser's attention to the Maxim gun, says the inventor. The King was on a visit to his Imperial nephew when one day he inquired casually of Wilhelm if he had chanced to notice the Kaiser's attention to the Maxim gun, says the inventor.

There happened to be one of the newly invented Maxims on a range not far from the palace and together with his guest, the Kaiser went to the range to watch it perform. Sir Hiram, who was present, adds:

"Orders were sent to have everything ready and when the Kaiser and the Prince visited the grounds they found four Maxim guns and four big targets at a distance of 200 metres. The old Gatling gun was first fired. It was very heavy and had six barrels. The Nordenfiedt five-barreled gun was also fired and the two-barreled Gardner. It required four men to serve each gun and when they attempted to work the guns too rapidly they seemed to jam. They got through with 150 to 200 rounds a minute. One man, an experienced gunner, then sat on the tail of the little Maxim gun, carefully adjusted the sights, pulled the trigger and 333 rounds went off in slightly over a half minute. (The Maxim gun is loaded and fired by its own recoil.) The Kaiser and the Prince then walked down and examined the targets. The hits made by the hand-worked machines were scattered all over the place. These guns had been disturbed by the working of the cranks and levers, whereas the Maxim, not being interfered with by an external force, had made nearly all hits in the bullseye or close to it.

"When the Kaiser returned, he placed his finger on the Maxim gun and said, 'That is the gun, there is no other.' He then caused orders to be given to turn these guns out very rapidly and in vast quantities, and they are now making history very much to our cost.

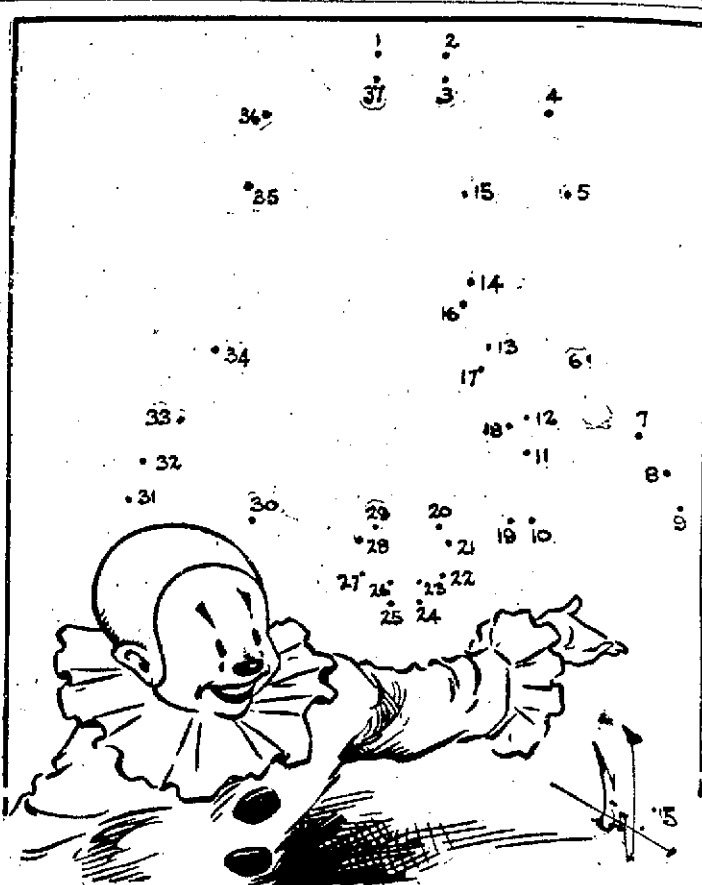

"If we wish to beat the Germans at their own game, it is necessary to be supplied with a great number of automatic machine guns."

Sir Hiram first began work on the automatic gun in 1881, when he was chief engineer and electrician of the U. S. Lighting company of New York. He later exhibited his invention before officials in France and England and after a more perfect machine had been made he took it to Germany where the Kaiser was the first to recognize its value.

In his statement, Sir Hiram says: "In the war between Russia and Japan, two-thirds of all the casualties among the Japanese were caused by Maxim guns and in the present war the most important arm is without doubt the automatic machine gun, firing rifle cartridges. It is fast supplanting the hand rifle."

It is with this weapon that a thin line of Germans, stretching across the continent, is able to hold back the French and English while vast hordes of the Kaiser's men are driving back the Russians on the Eastern front.

Janesville Gazette:

I wish to write you of the success I had from advertising in your paper. About a week ago I called up the Gazette in the morning and asked that an ad be inserted for a farm hand to work by the day. Between five and six o'clock I had answered the phone seven times, and hired a man who is still with me and a good man, too. Was away in the evening so do not know how many more called, but during Wednesday and Thursday I had six or seven more calls, so am satisfied that advertising in the Gazette is a great help in a hurry.

SLICE DOWN BUDGET FOR STATE SCHOOLS

SPEAKER WHITTET'S AMEND-MENT CUTTING APPROPRIA-TION BY $388,479
CARRIES.

FEW OPPOSE ECONOMY

Twenty-three Oppose Appropriation of $2,273,129 for Twelve Institutions During Next Biennium.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., July 30.—An amended bill carrying an appropriation of $2,273,129 for the support of the twelve charitable and penal institutions of the state for the next biennium period passed the house yesterday afternoon by a vote of 52 to 23.
Before final action was taken the house adopted an amendment offered by Speaker Whittet and approved by the state board of control reducing the appropriation recommended by the finance committee $388,479.
The appropriation made by the legislature for the next biennium is identical with the amount expended by these institutions for operation during the past biennium.

Davidson Called For.
The finance committee bill carried an appropriation of $2,495,488. Speaker Whittet amendment for a reduction of nearly $400,000 caused so much discussion as to the advisability of adopting it that Governor Davidson, president of the state board of control, was summoned to appear before the assembly sitting as a committee of the whole, to explain why the board should ask for larger appropriations and claim these were necessary earlier in the session and now back down and ask for a reduction.
The estimates of the board of control to the finance committee were reduced $773,000 by the finance committee and the adoption of the Whittet amendment brings the total reduction to more than $1,000,000.

"I think the charitable and penal institutions of the state can be run for the same amount they were during the past biennium," declared ex-Governor Davidson. "This can be done without any injustice to the inmates or the crippling of any of the institutions."
In his statement to the legislature
Dr. Davidson criticized the present practice of allowing prisoners to earn money while in prison. He said that some of these men earned as high as 50 cents a day, while in prison, and that the amount paid to prisoners during the past biennium was approximately $28,000. Assemblyman Axel Johnson said that this money in many instances went to the support of the prisoners' families.

"I think this is placing a premium on crime," declared President Davidson of the board. "I think this law should be repealed."

Reduction Equitable.

The president of the board said that he had given little attention to the budget until recently, but he was satisfied the institutions could operate on less than proposed in the finance committee bill. At first he said that not all of the board had agreed to all of the reductions, but later came back and said that the board were unanimous for the reductions.
Numerous questions were asked of President Davidson, as to why the board had asked for more money, but were now willing to "make less."
Throughout the president maintained that the reduction proposed in the Whittet amendment would leave a sufficient amount. He suggested, however, that it would be better if the legislature would allow the board to use the balances unexpended at one institution in supporting another institution.

Answering questions put by Assemblyman Hambrecht, President
Davidson said that the Whittet amendment proposed to cut in two the amount which prisoners would be allowed to earn. He said that while he favored the repeal of the law, the warden at the prison had told him that the absolute "repeal would result in a riot at the prison."

When President Davidson had finished, Mr. Hambrecht offered an amendment to restore the appropriation for the payment of prisoners to $28,000, the amount in the finance committee bill. This amendment was defeated by a vote of 32 to 40. The original Whittet amendment was then adopted. On the final passage of the bill twenty-three members voted against the measure, some suggesting that the appropriation was still too high. Those who voted against the bill were: Assemblymen
Ballard, Engebretsen, Gruenewald,
Hager, Hambrecht, Herzog, Lentz,
McGowan, Minkey, Mortensen, Nord-
man, Ofstie, Pickart, Pieper, Rentz, Schroeder, Smith, Spoor, Van de Zande, Weber, Wells and Zinn.

Cuts Building Fund.
The amendment making the reduction wipes out most of the appropriations for maintenance and building improvements. It strikes out nearly $25,000 that was to be used for apparatus at the school at Sparta; $27,000 for a new building at the state's prison; $5,700 for a green house at the state hospital at Mendota; $18,000 for buildings at the tuberculosis camp at Tomahawk Lake; $4,000 for cottages at the Wales sanatorium, and $10,000 for improvements at the state reformatory. The finance committee bill provided for the operation of the women's reformatory at Taychee-dab and the same amount for the feeble-minded at Union Grove during 1917.
One institution will be allowed $10,000
for operation and the other $15,000, thus accomplishing a reduction of $25,000.

The assembly killed the Donnelly resolution for an investigation of the service, rates and agreements of the American Telegraph & Telephone company and its subsidiary lines. It refused to reconsider the vote by which it killed the Huber bill to allow school districts to hold more than one special meeting. Assemblyman Nelson of Dane county made an impassioned speech for the latter measure.

Without a roll call it advanced the Smith proposed amendment to the state constitution, which would allow members of the legislature to fix the salary of members in excess of $500.
It killed a bill prohibiting an undertaker holding the office of coroner, and passed a bill appropriating $10-000 for an investigation by a special committee of the swamp land claims of the state against the federal government.

Handy Men of Iceland.

There are no trades or guilds in Iceland, every man being compelled to depend upon his own skill for his supplies. The natives make their own shoes, shoe their own horses and manufacture their saddles. A few artisans are found in the capital—for example, a bookbinder, a jeweler and others.

"It's a long way to Tipperary," but you can reach it with a want ad.
